

Conference Presentations by Ph.D. Students

Fostering openness to the international environment, both academic and economic, is an important objective of our Ph.D.

Students meet other students from other institutions, as well as professors from a variety of international backgrounds, either directly or through specialized academic colloquia or conferences, during which they regularly present their research, in order to become familiar with in vivo work currently being done by the scientific community.

Following are examples of presentations by students of their research in specialized academic colloquia or conferences organized world wide, since 2007:
